

SUMMER NOON-DAY DREAM.

BY MISS MURAN ARCHER TALLEY, OF VIRGINIA.

The leaves are still, the breezes hushed,
Or sing a drowsy number,
And all throughout the silent day
The golden hours slumber.
The ripples lily laps alone
Beneath the no one lids' gleaming;
Oh sure the drowsy summer-time
Was made loose for dreaming.

Within my open window flats
A slumberous breath of rose,
And in the softly shaded room
Silence reigns alone.
And liquid lustre on the wall
Cool, rippling waves resemble,
As to and fro, with motion slow,
The leafy shadows tremble.

A sense of silence and repose—
Of soft and tranquil motion—
A murmur as of sleeping winds
Upon a sleeping ocean;
And softly o'er my senses steals
A luxury Klysian.
And all delights of drowsy thought
Are mingled in my vision.

Oh childing voice, wake me not,
Nor turn my rhyme to reason—
For life is mingled with play—
And each may have its noon.
The winter-time for study's toil,
The spring for pleasure's scheme,
Autumn for the poet's thought,
And summer-time for dreaming!

The following story is told of General Greenville M. Dore, of Iowa. While in command at Vicksburg he enforced strictly the regulations in regard to cotton. The speculators tried his metal by the usual appliances—an offer of $50,000 in gold; then $100,000, $150,000, $200,000. He then sent a dispatch to Washington, asking to be removed from command. He said he had been offered $300,000 to do his duty, which was so near his price that he was afraid the next offer would bring him.

It is said the agents in England, of Washington College, Virginia—the same that Gen. Lee provides for—exported donations to the amount of $100,000. He is doing very well, but gives no portion to the agents, and the Mississippi river reports $50,000, which is to be largely increased when the cotton crop is sold. All this in addition to $150,000, is now on hand.

GREENLEY AFTER BERRY—Greenley does not give Berry a very warm greeting as "he is a man and a brother," on his appearance as a Radical. He says: "There is reason to fear that the editor of the Herald will presently announce his decision to the Republican party. And at last Satan came also." Here is another solid shot from the same "son of a gun."

"The old Main" are very powerful, but money and money are still more so. For proof, vide New York Herald.

QUINTINES—A tea party without sound is like a knife without a handle. Words without deeds are like husks without seeds. A creature without grace are like a clock without a face. A land without laws like a cat without her claws. A man without a wife is like a fork without a handle. A woman without a man is like a handle without a pan. A quarrel without fighting is like thunder without lightning.

THE UNIFORM OF THE GENERAL AND LIEUTENANT GENERAL.—By War Department Order, No. 73, the uniform of the General and Lieutenant General of the United States Army is prescribed as follows: For the General.—The same as Major General, except that the coat three stars, and the two rows of buttons on the breast, placed by four, and on the shoulder-straps and epaulettes four silver stars. For the Lieutenant General.—The same as for a Major General except that on the shoulder-straps and epaulettes there shall be three silver stars.

Dr. Brownlow joined at Erie in Pennsylvania, when about to speak. He was unfortunately recovered.—Boston Commonwealth.

An unwashed newboy, being asked what made him so dirty replied "I was made as they tell me of the dust of the ground, and I reckon it is just wearing out."

H. A. CHADBOURNE & CO.

HAVE this day opened a General Auction, Commission and Grocery House at the store formerly occupied by W. L. Burr & Co. We will sell at auction or on commission, all kinds and varieties of Country Produce, Dry Goods, Groceries, Liqueurs, Household and Kitchen Furniture, Farm Tools, Hides, Horses, Cows and Stock of all kinds; also, Real Estate bought and sold. Particular attention will be given to all auction sales in any portion of the country, and to the administration, executors, etc., and will attend to the payment of all Revenue and State taxes; will receive and promptly forward to the owners, Cotton and other products of the country, upon which we are prepared to make liberal advances in cash, and pledge ourselves to make prompt and faithful return to those who entrust us with their business.

We have perfected arrangements with some of the most celebrated manufacturers of machinery, which enables us to furnish any variety of machine the wants of the country may demand, on more advantageous terms than individuals can order for themselves. We can also furnish wagons, carriages, buggies and harness, of every description. In short, every thing wanted in the country on better terms than parties can purchase for themselves. Since our arrangements are entirely satisfactory, we believe, it will be to the advantage of all, to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.
